

How to Save Money on Prescription Drugs

Shop Around

Drug prices vary greatly from one pharmacy to another for the same exact drug. Shopping around is an important step in becoming a savvy and informed healthcare consumer. This can be said for any healthcare need that is not an emergency.

In general, pharmacies like Costco and Walmart often have the best prices on drugs, while major retail pharmacies like CVS and Walgreens typically have the highest prices.

Seek Out Drug and Pharmacy Discount Programs

Some great resources to get the best prices for prescription drugs are discount sites like www.goodrx.com.

Through their website you can compare the prices of drugs based on the pharmacy's in your area. You may be surprised how much the same drug varies in price from one pharmacy to another. Goodrx also has free coupons to get the lowest price for the prescription you need.

Kroger Pharmacies also have a discount program by paying a small annual fee for access to significant discounts for your prescription drugs. Contact your local Kroger pharmacy, ask your Kroger pharmacist, or visit their website for details.

Talk to Your Pharmacist

Your pharmacist is not only a great resource for your health, but also a great resource for drug prices and ways to pay for your prescriptions. Your pharmacist can tell you what the cost of your drug is with or without insurance. Sometimes the cash price can be less than your Rx copay if applicable to your plan. It doesn't hurt to ask because pharmacists and pharmacy techs have no problem telling you, but they are not permitted to tell you unless you ask.
