

Five things to KNOW when buying health insurance

1. KNOW it is real insurance. Make sure that it is not just an association, a ministry, a sharing or some other insurance-like product. You want real big dollar coverage, that is backed by a company with a proven track record.
2. KNOW who the TPA is (Plan administrator). Just as important as the insurance company is who manages the plan, which includes payments, claims and networks. The TPA should have a large reputable PPO to make sure you have access to providers and get great network discounts.
3. KNOW what is covered, more importantly KNOW what is NOT. You always hear “yes that’s covered”, but know what is NOT. Things like preventive care, eye surgery, back and joint surgery are all common exclusions for many health plans. Ask ‘What’s not covered?’ Every health plan has exclusions, know them.
4. KNOW how long the policy is good for. The only way to get real big dollar coverage is with a short term plan, which could be good from 1 month or 3 years. Know what you are buying and get as much time as possible.
5. KNOW the limits of the coverage. While many plans boast big policy limits like $1 or $2 million, they also may contain internal limits. These limits can seriously lower coverage amounts and put you in a bad financial situation. Know them. Ask about limits
